Introduction: Why This Content, for This Group?

The Kids 1 & 2 No-Gi class brings together children ages 6 to 12, an age range that spans two distinct developmental stages — that's why the program is built around clear monthly goals (the "Goal of the Month"), giving instructors a shared objective to adapt intensity and complexity based on the group present in each class.

Without the gi, training at this age focuses even more on universal body-control fundamentals — base, hips, balance, and positioning — which support any fighting style in the future, with or without the gi. That's why the program blends pure technique with educational games (takedown games, balance games, defense games), which teach the same principles in a playful way, respecting how children at this age learn best.

The year's progression follows a clear logic: first, control and maintaining top position (February and March), then escaping bad positions and guard recovery (April), introducing simple takedowns (May), submission and passing systems (June through September), new guards (October), and finally, more complete and free-flowing live-fighting simulations (November and December) — always closing each month with review, drills, and games.

This document serves as a reference guide for the team's instructors: each month has its central goal and weekly classes with the techniques and activities to be covered, ensuring pedagogical consistency across all No-Gi Kids classes.
